Tutor biographies

Ian spent 32 years in the Royal Air Force as a navigator initially on the Vulcan bomber, but latterly on the Hercules transport aircraft. He deployed to theatres as diverse as the Falkland Islands and Afghanistan, and commanded No 47 Squadron from 2001 – 2003. In the latter stages of his military career he entered a very academic stream, gaining 2 post-graduate degrees and ending his career in an MoD think-tank where he led a team looking forward 40 years to consider the use of air and space power. Ian is presently working on his PhD and is employed as a part-time lecturer and supervisor within the fields of International Relations and Security Studies.

Day school content:

The news seems dominated by war, violence and conflict, but these forces also lie at the heart of how and why the world operates as it does at the level of international politics. This course will look at the role of war in forging but also threatening the international order, will consider efforts to regulate war, ask what is peace and how might it be achieved, and consider current threats, conflicts and violence that increasingly are not based on the State - the building block of international society.

Programme:
09:30	Terrace bar open for pre-course tea/ coffee
10:00 – 11:15	Session 1: Introductions and Course Outline. The State and the rise of the International Order. The role (and benefits!) of War.
11:15	Coffee
11:45 – 13:00	Session 2: Threats to peace and stability, and attempts to regulate them: the Just War Tradition and the responses to WWI and WWII.
13:00	Lunch
14:00 – 15:15	Session 3: What is Peace? Attempts to regulate both the conduct and the threat of War. Can Peace ever truly be achieved?
15:15	Tea
15:30 – 16:45	Session 4: The World today: is the State-based order still fit for purpose? How do we deal with threats that we can see (terrorism, IS, the threat of nuclear proliferation) to those we cannot see (globalization)? An International Society for tomorrow?
16:45	Day school ends
