Tutor biography

Derek Niemann is a freelance writer and editor specialising in natural history. In 2012, he interrupted a career writing about bees and butterflies to begin researching and writing a family history story that was published in 2015 as A Nazi in the Family (Short Books), based on the SS grandfather he never knew. His most recent non-fiction book A Tale of Trees: The battle to save Britain's ancient woodland was published in October 2016 (Short Books). Derek's other non-fiction title was Birds in a Cage (Short Books, 2011), telling the story of four Prisoner of War birdwatchers in World War II. Derek is a country diary columnist for the Guardian, and edits the magazine of the Small Woods Association. Formerly he was children's magazines editor for the RSPB (1998-2014) and has written a number of wildlife books for children.

Course syllabus

Aims:

1. To explore a range of styles and techniques in life writing.
2. To develop participants' skills in researching and capturing life writing in words.
3. To increase participants' awareness and appreciation of the tools that go to producing life writing and resources that are available for them to mine the past.
4. To hone research skills in using official and unofficial records.

Content:

This course offers students fresh perspectives on producing creative writing tied to their own family story. We will be examining the work of a wide range of writers of different backgrounds and nationalities to find ideas and inspiration. Students will learn about resources available for researching their family story and their family's histories and how to make use of them. And the course will encourage participants to write about family history in engaging and creative ways, exploring the imaginative possibilities in documents, letters, everyday objects and places.

Presentation of the course:

This course will involve a mixture of class discussion and practical work.

As a result of the course, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:

1. Recognise the techniques in which life writers make their subject real for the reader.
2. Feel confident in researching and interpreting records, as well as investigating and drawing from archives.
3. Be able to identify other sources of material to follow up family history stories and, if they so wish, feel empowered to write up their own family history.
4. Begin to write up the family's story.
