Undergraduate Diploma in Creative Writing: Advanced Non-Fiction

2019 – 2020

Course code: 1920DCR501

COURSE GUIDE
Welcome to the Undergraduate Diploma in Creative Writing: Advanced Fiction and Non-Fiction, a University of Cambridge award offered by the Institute of Continuing Education (ICE). The Diploma is taught and awarded at FHEQ level 5 (i.e. second-year undergraduate level) and attracts 60 credits. The award is completed in one academic year. For further information about academic credit please see our website: http://www.ice.cam.ac.uk/studying-with-us/information-for-students/qualifications-that-we-offer.

The course offers three termly units and a syllabus and reading and resource list for each of these units are included in this course specification.

The programme aims to:

1. introduce students to a wide range of non-fiction styles in order to stimulate and develop their own creative writing;
2. develop students’ critical skills in assessing the work of published authors and their own writing;
3. provide opportunities for students to experiment with their own work and to build their confidence;
4. extend students’ knowledge of the transferability of techniques between different forms of non-fiction;
5. encourage students to contextualise their writing within a variety of traditions and styles;
6. provide opportunities for progression to further study in the area of creative writing.

Transferable skills for further study and employability

- The capacity for independent thought and judgement
- The development of independent learning, study and time management skills
- The deployment of skills in critical reasoning
- The development of competence in using IT to support one’s work
- The ability to work with others, productively and equitably
- The qualities necessary for employment requiring the exercise of some personal responsibility and the demonstration of high levels of motivation and personal commitment through part-time study

Study hours

The award of academic credit is a means of quantifying and recognising learning and within the UK, one credit notionally represents 10 hours of learning¹. Each of the units in this course attracts 20 credits so students should expect to need to study for approximately 200 hours in total to complete each unit successfully. However, it is recognised that students study at different paces and use a variety of approaches, so this is a recommendation, rather than a hard-and-fast calculation.

Teaching staff

Academic Director

Midge Gillies

Midge Gillies is the author of seven non-fiction books, including biographies of Amy Johnson and Marie Lloyd. In The Barbed-Wire University (Aurum Press, 2011) she explored what it was really like to be an Allied Prisoner of War in the Second World War. She is the author of Writing Lives (CUP, 2009) and co-author, with Sally Cline, of *Literary Non-Fiction: A Writers’
& Artists’ Companion (Bloomsbury Academic, 2015). She studied History at Girton College and has written for a range of national, international and regional newspapers and magazines. Her book about army wives from the Crimean War to the present day was published in August 2016. For three years she was Royal Literary Fund Fellow at Magdalene College, Cambridge. Her PhD concentrated on the use of oral history in creative non-fiction.

Tutors

Miranda Doyle is part of the Life Writing Team at the University of Cambridge Creative Writing Centre based at Madingley Hall. She also teaches memoir and life writing at the Faber Academy, and creative writing as part of Hills Road’s Sixth Form College Adult Education programme. She has a distinction in Creative and Life Writing from Goldsmiths and led the Philosophy Department’s Autobiography: Self and Truth module for five years at Anglia Ruskin University. Her fascination with the form is longstanding, motivating classes that seek to explore a writer’s relationship with the page. Through her workshops she hopes to build a mutually supportive foundation for all her students through which they can develop meaningful relationships with one another, which will support them throughout their writing lives. Her memoir, A Book of Untruths, was published in June 2017 by Faber & Faber.

Dr Lucy Durneen

Dr Lucy Durneen’s short stories, poetry and non-fiction have been published and commended internationally in journals including World Literature Today, Hotel Amerika, and Meniscus. Her fiction has been Pushcart Prize nominated and Highly Commended in the Manchester Fiction Prize, while her non-fiction has been adapted for broadcast on BBC Radio 4, and listed as a Notable Essay in Best American Essays 2017. Her first short story collection, Wild Gestures, was published in 2017 with Australian press MidnightSun and won Best Short Story Collection at the Saboteur Awards in London in May of the same year. Her research interests include war writing, literatures of exile, migration and asylum, and graphic narratives, as well as short stories, creative non-fiction and hybrid forms of writing.

Derek Niemann is a freelance writer and editor specialising in natural history. In 2012, he interrupted a career writing about bees and butterflies to begin researching and writing a family history story that was published in 2015 as A Nazi in the Family (Short Books), based on the SS grandfather he never knew. His most recent non-fiction book A Tale of Trees: The battle to save Britain’s ancient woodland was published in October 2016 (Short Books). Derek’s other non-fiction title was Birds in a Cage (Short Books, 2011), telling the story of four Prisoner of War birdwatchers in World War II. Derek is a country diary columnist for the Guardian, and edits the magazine of the Small Woods Association. Formerly he was children’s magazines editor for the RSPB (1998-2014) and has written a number of wildlife books for children.

Jeremy Seal a travel writer with a profound interest in Turkey. His books include A Fez of the Heart (1995), The Snakebite Survivors’ Club (1999), The Wreck at Sharpnose Point (2001), Santa: A Life (2004) and Meander (2012). He also contributes to a wide range of publications including the Sunday Times, Daily Telegraph and the Australian. He has taught creative writing courses for the Arvon Foundation and was a writing fellow for the Royal Literary Fund at the University of Bath from 2009-2011. Jeremy has also worked in TV presenting, and runs cultural tours to Turkey.

Creative Non-Fiction: People

Start date 6 October 2019
End date 8 December 2019

Day Sunday
Time 10.00am – 5.00pm

Venue Madingley Hall, Madingley, Cambridge, CB23 8AQ

Tutor Miranda Doyle and Midge Gillies
No of meetings 4 Sunday day-schools on 6 October, 20 October, 24 November and 8 December 2019

Aims

- To introduce students to creative non-fiction, with a focus on biography and memoir.
- To analyse various techniques of organising a fragmented, overcrowded life.
- To encourage students to experiment with their own writing.
- To enable students to write in ways that harness established literary traditions.

Content

What is Creative Non-fiction, or some people prefer: Narrative Non-fiction? The American writer Lee Gutkind, who helped coin the phrase, defines it as true stories, well told. Whether journal article, memoir, biography, essay, what readers are looking for in non-fiction is factually accurate prose about real people and real events that is compelling.

The word ‘creative’ has attracted many dissenters, but crafting stories, wherever we find them, needs writerly solutions so that our readers can be as enthralled by memoir as they are by the novel. Encouraging us, as writers, to find our place in the story, creative non-fiction has a flexibility that enables us to be both poetic and journalistic so as to tell those larger truths.

By holding the story ourselves, as narrators, we can navigate conflicting stories, and by being honest with the reader earn their trust.

Presentation of the unit

The unit will take a practical approach to writing. It will aim to demystify the techniques and tools associated with non-fiction and encourage students to feel more confident about their own writing voice.

Students will discuss different techniques in seminars and experiment with their own writing through a range of exercises. They will also be given the chance to workshop their writing in the constructive and supportive environment of the day schools.

| Sunday 6 October 2019  | Day-school one: Creative Non-Fiction and Life Writing (Miranda Doyle) | Writing Life and creative Non-fiction we are often dealing with chaos, seeking out the threads that can hold a story together from the mess that telling the real and the true often creates. We’ll look at the blurring between fiction and non-fiction and how structuring our stories can liberate us from the anxiety that may often hold us back. Together we’ll visit the Cambridge Museum to explore its collection and its resources, and take a guided walk to see how, together, the Museum team have made the chaotic real both enjoyable and accessible. How might we do the same for ourselves?
Please read in advance: The Woman Warrior, Maxine Hong Kingston  |
| Sunday 20 October 2019 | Day-school two: Writing about Self            | We’ll explore subjectivity. How a narrator can hold together the fragmented stories of others, but also how writing the other provokes understandable protest from those who may find themselves peopling another’s text. How can we be ethical? Guest speaker and writer, Joanne Limburg, writer of The Woman who Thought too Much, Small Pieces and A Want of Kindness will explore with us the ethics of writing about others.
Please read in advance: Tell me How it Ends, Valeria Luiselli and Maggie Nelson's The Argonauts  |
| Sunday 24 November 2019| Day-school three: Biography (Midge Gillies)   | In this day school we will discuss what elements make it possible to write about a life. Are some lives easier to write about than others and who “owns” a life story. Please read in advance: The Cut Out Girl by Bart van Es |
| Sunday 8 December 2019 | Day-school four: Research Tools (Miranda Doyle) | Whatever kind of life we are writing, biography, essay, memoir, script, poem we need to invest in the lives, places and times that we are telling. Guest speaker and dramatist, Fraser Grace, writer of Breakfast with Mugabe, produced by the RSC, Kalashnikov and Don't Breathe
Please read in advance: The House by the Lake, Thomas Harding |
Word will reveal how he selects from a wide scope of research to build dramatic stories that to the audience feel effortless.

This day school will also give students a chance to workshop their developing assignments, allowing them to roadtest their writing with others in the group under tutorial guidance.

Learning Outcomes

As a result of the unit, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:

(i) show an awareness of how to structure and develop an extended piece of life writing;
(ii) develop skills to manage the structuring of life stories;
(iii) assess the merits of different treatments of memoir and biography;
(iv) demonstrate an understanding of the link between different creative forms and ideas and how aspects of them may be used within their work.

As this is a Diploma course, equivalent at least to second-year undergraduate standard, students are required to carry out tasks between day schools to make the most of the course. These tasks include reading books relevant to ideas to be explored in the following day school and completing written exercises or small pieces of research.

All students are encouraged to maintain a private journal or commentary on their own writing and thoughts throughout the course. Although this will not be marked it will provide a useful resource when the student plans their critical commentary (see below).

Most seminars will encourage discussion and students should expect to contribute to these and it is hoped they will be willing to show or read out examples of their own writing.

The end-of-term assignment will be made up of two elements:

1. A creative piece of writing of between 2,500 and 3,000 words, the title of which must be agreed with the tutor. The assignment may be a chapter or section of a work of creative non-fiction. This may be a piece of nature or travel writing, part of a memoir or biography, or a piece of narrative history. It must be an original piece of work and, ideally, developed in response to issues explored in the course.

   Assignment length: 2,500–3,000 words. Weighting: 80% of unit grade.

2. A critical commentary on the creative work submitted by the student for this module. This will give the student the opportunity to reflect on the choices made when writing their creative piece and help them to understand the process of writing. By writing the commentary the student will have a clearer idea of the extent to which they achieved what they set out to achieve and how they have been influenced by other writers. Advice about how to write a successful critical commentary will be offered during the course.

   Assignment length: 1,500 words. Weighting: 20% of unit grade.

Please note that not every learning outcome will apply to both the creative assignment and the critical commentary.
Closing date for the submission of assignments: Monday 6 January 2020 by 12.00 noon GMT

Syllabus for second unit
Lent term 2020

Writing about Place

Start date 19 January 2020
End date 15 March 2020
Day Sunday
Time 10.00am – 5.00pm
Venue Madingley Hall, Madingley, Cambridge, CB23 8AQ
Tutor Derek Niemann and Jeremy Seal
No of meetings 4 Sunday day-schools on 19 January, 2 February, 1 March and 15 March 2020

Aims
• To introduce students to a range of different ways of writing about place;
• To analyse various techniques of writing about place – both rural and urban;
• To encourage students to experiment with their own writing;
• To enable students to write in ways that harness established literary traditions.

Content
Establishing a sense of place is an important component of much creative non-fiction writing. This unit will set out to show that ‘place’ can serve far more functions than simply as a backdrop to a narrative. We will look at how different writers with a strong sense of place bring locations to the fore, so that they are fundamental to the author’s work, setting its tone, content and character.

Students will be encouraged to explore both the breadth and depth of subjects and techniques that combine to create a sense of place. The group will explore approaches to travel and family memoir writing that capture the feel of faraway destinations, as well as grounding themselves in the local by using both Madingley Hall itself and Cambridge as source material for their own experimental writing. Students will also study examples of various nature writers’ non-fiction in embodying place within their work. In the final session, the group will – with the help of a guest speaker – address often under-used aspects of place writing by examining the role of food and human senses in capturing the essence of a location.

Presentation of the unit
The unit will take a practical approach to writing. It will aim to demystify the techniques and tools associated with non-fiction and encourage students to feel more confident about their own writing voice.

Students will discuss different techniques in seminars and experiment with their own writing through a range of exercises. They will also be given the chance to workshop their writing in the constructive and supportive environment of the Saturday schools.

| Sunday 19 January 2020 | Creating a sense of place (Derek Niemann) | In writing about places as “cultural landscapes”, author Tim Dee notes that “every description and every thought arises from someone being detained – by views, buildings, sculpture, weather, chairs, churches, trees, streets, people memories.”
|                      |                                       | In this opening session we ask why should we stop to be “detained”? What magic lies in the delineation of a place that makes it essential to a piece of writing?
|                      |                                       | What are the key elements involved in creating a sense of place and how do different writers master them? We'll carry out a practical experiment on drawing out some essentials within the four walls of Madingley Hall, and we will also travel to a different continent with guest speaker Aida Edemariam, who talks about how she helps the reader visualise life in early 20th century Ethiopia in her book The Wife’s Tale. |
| Sunday 2 February 2020 | Going places (Jeremy Seal)            | Travel writer Jeremy Seal leads a day featuring a field trip into Cambridge, where students can practice their skills on the city’s popular sights What do we observe in our surroundings, and how do we deploy those observations to engage and hold the attention of readers? And to what extent should the author be present in his or her own narrative? Where and why are we going, in short, and what can we do to carry the reader with us? We'll explore these questions in the context of two books which evoke distant places in very different ways. |
| Sunday 1 March 2020   | Nature writing (Derek Niemann)        | What are the components that go together to make up the burgeoning genre that is titled ‘nature writing’? Can we and should we write about nature as if it is separate from our human experience? How do we render the great outdoors, nature itself, in non-fiction writing?
|                      |                                       | We'll be scrutinising work by two of Britain’s leading nature writers to | understand the opportunities, challenges and limitations within modern nature writing.

Students will also be encouraged to go on a field exercise, to head out (if possible) into Madingley’s meadows, wood and around its lake, so that it can serve as an outdoor classroom, a source of inspiration for participants to experiment with their own nature writing.

Sunday 15 March 2020

Senses of place (Derek Niemann)

Please read in advance: Elizabeth Collingham, Curry: a tale of cooks and conquerors

A place can be a physical location: it can also be a sensual one and many writers have highly-developed abilities to render scenes more powerfully using the five human senses.

We’ll be studying the role of sound – and music in particular – as well as examining the treatment of touch, taste, sight and smell in non-fiction. How can each enhance creative writing about place?

Food historian and writer Lizzie Collingham adds spice to this session, as our guest speaker for a day, revealing the ingredients that go to make good food writing.

This day school will also give students a chance to workshop their developing assignments, allowing them to roadtest their writing with others in the group under tutorial guidance.

Learning Outcomes

As a result of the unit, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:

(i) show an awareness of how to structure and develop an extended piece of prose;
(ii) develop skills to create a sense of place and/or time;
(iii) assess the merits of different ideas and treatments for a fictional narrative;
(iv) demonstrate an understanding of the link between different creative forms and ideas and how aspects of them may be used within their work.

Student assessment

As this is a Diploma course, equivalent at least to second-year undergraduate standard, students are required to carry out tasks between day-schools to make the most of the course. These tasks include reading books relevant to ideas to be explored in the following day-school and completing written exercises or small pieces of research.

All students are encouraged to maintain a private journal or commentary on their own writing and thoughts throughout the course. Although this will not be marked it will provide a useful

The end-of-term assignment will be made up of two elements:

1. A creative piece of writing of between 2,500 and 3,000 words, the title of which must be agreed with the tutor. The assignment may be a chapter or section of a work of non-fiction that focuses on place. This may be a piece of nature or travel writing, part of a memoir or biography, or a piece of narrative history in which place plays a key part. It must be an original piece of work and, ideally, developed in response to issues explored in the course.

Assignment length: 2,500-3,000 words. Weighting: 80% of unit grade.

2. A critical commentary on the creative work submitted by the student for this module. This will give the student the opportunity to reflect on the choices made when writing their creative piece and help them to understand the process of writing. Please note that not every learning outcome will apply to both the creative assignment and the critical commentary.

Syllabus for third unit
Easter term 2020

Creative Non-Fiction: Objects

Start date 26 April 2020
End date 20 June 2020

Day Sunday
Time 10.00am – 5.00pm

Venue Madingley Hall, Madingley, Cambridge, CB23 8AQ
Tutor Dr Lucy Durneen and Miranda Doyle
No of meetings 4 Sunday day-schools on 26 April, 3 May, 24 May and
21 June 2020

Aims
- To introduce students to a range of different ways of writing about objects.
- To analyse various techniques of writing about objects and their connection to different forms of creative non-fiction.
- To encourage students to experiment with their own writing.
- To enable students to write in ways that harness established literary traditions.
- To evaluate our understanding of the ‘fourth genre’ of Creative Non-Fiction.

Content
Simple objects can tell a multitude of stories – personal, collective, geographic, scientific. This unit aims to explore not only a variety of examples of texts with a central focus on a particular object, specimen or ‘thing’, but also to analyse the different narrative means of expressing these stories, in both short and long form. We will look at texts that blend genres, lyric essays, and medical writing, amongst others. We’ll explore the wealth of objects held in the city’s museum collections to provide source material for writing tasks. We’ll also revisit the core idea of what creative non-fiction might be, its challenges, possibilities, and surprises, and consider whether or not our perceptions of its ‘hard borders’ - our understanding of what it means to write ‘(re)creatively’ - might have changed over the course of the Diploma.

Presentation of the unit
The unit will take a practical approach to writing. It will aim to demystify the techniques and tools associated with non-fiction and encourage students to feel more confident about their own writing voice.

Students will discuss different techniques in seminars and experiment with their own writing through a range of exercises. They will also be given the chance to workshop their writing in the constructive and supportive environment of the Saturday schools.

<td>Day-school four: Science &amp; Medical Writing (Miranda Doyle)</td>
<td>We’ll explore how the people who inhabit what can sometimes feel like difficult and dry technical stories to bring creative, and revolutionary, discoveries to life through a focus on specific objects or specimens. Together we’ll visit a laboratory in the University’s Zoology Department, look down microscopes and take a tour of its museum, where specimens of the famous Galapagos finches from the Beagle journey, and the microscope slides that Darwin prepared during his study of barnacles (Cirripedia) can be found. This day school will also give students a chance to workshop their developing assignments, allowing them to roadtest their writing with others in the group under tutorial guidance, and to revisit the idea of what constitutes Creative Non-Fiction.</td>

Learning Outcomes

As a result of the unit, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:

(i) show an awareness of how to structure and develop an extended piece of creative non-fiction;
(ii) develop skills to manage the structuring of long and short form CNF;
(iii) assess the merits of different methods of expanding the 'stories' of specific objects;
(iv) demonstrate an understanding of the link between different creative forms and ideas and how aspects of them may be used within their work.

Student assessment

As this is a Diploma course, equivalent at least to second-year undergraduate standard, students are required to carry out tasks between day-schools to make the most of the course. These tasks include reading books relevant to ideas to be explored in the following day-school and completing written exercises or small pieces of research.

All students are encouraged to maintain a private journal or commentary on their own writing and thoughts throughout the course. Although this will not be marked it will provide a useful resource when the student plans their critical commentary (see below).

Most seminars will encourage discussion and students should expect to contribute to these and it is hoped they will be willing to show or read out examples of their own writing.

The end-of-term assignment will be made up of two elements:

1. A creative piece of writing of between 2,500 and 3,000 words, the title of which must be agreed with the tutor. The assignment may be a chapter or section of a work of non-fiction that focuses on place. This may be a piece of nature or travel writing, part of a memoir or biography, or a piece of narrative history in which place plays a key part. It must be an original piece of work and, ideally, developed in response to issues explored in the course.
Assignment length: 2,500-3,000 words. Weighting: 80% of unit grade.

2. A critical commentary on the creative work submitted by the student for this module. This will give the student the opportunity to reflect on the choices made when writing their creative piece and help them to understand the process of writing. By writing the commentary the student will have a clearer idea of the extent to which they achieved what they set out to achieve and how they have been influenced by other writers. Advice about how to write a successful critical commentary will be offered during the course.

Assignment length: 1,500 words. Weighting: 20% of unit grade.

Please note that not every learning outcome will apply to both the creative assignment and the critical commentary.

Closing date for the submission of assignments: Monday 13 July 2020 by 12.00 noon BST*

Reading and resource list

A Reader of Short Essays will be provided for Day-School Three, but the texts from which these essays are taken are listed here, and students are encouraged to read the full text if they wish.
