Julie Webb is a psychotherapist and supervisor in private practice in Cambridge and a member of the counselling and wellbeing team at Anglia Ruskin University. As a counselling trainer and lecturer in both FE and HE settings, Julie is passionate about experiential process: how we encounter one another and the ethics involved in empathic, supportive and encouraging environments.

She has a particular interest in the relevance of philosophy to therapy and Zen Buddhism; has published reviews and articles in professional therapy journals and is co-editor of Therapy and the Counter-tradition: the edge of philosophy (2016). Her latest contribution is a chapter in Revisioning Person-centered Therapy (2018).

Course syllabus

Aims:
The aim of the course is to introduce students to complementary ideas from both Philosophy and Therapy in order to gain insight into where meaning and value may be present in their everyday lives and how they experience themselves in the presence of others. Students' thinking will be stimulated by enquiring about their lives, and the lives of others, as narratives.

Content:
In the spirit of the subject matter, students will be encouraged to question what makes their lives and experience meaningful and distinctive. Students will engage with existential questions of self and meaning by thinking about and engaging in experiential therapeutic exercises. How can an examined life help us to be more creative, and more fulfilled individuals? Questions like these will be considered against the backdrop of philosophical ideas from Ludwig Wittgenstein, Friedrich Nietzsche, Judith Butler and others; which in turn will illuminate aspects of Existential philosophy, existential psychotherapy and person-centred psychotherapy.

Presentation of the course:
Teaching methods: lecture; class discussion; experiential exercises; small group reflective practice; reflective writing practice.

As a result of the course, within the constraints of the time available, students should:

- Have an awareness of philosophy in practice as therapy.
- Begin to develop a practice of self-awareness.
- Write from a position of experiential knowing.
