Tutor biography
Course Director

Dr Janet Watson (tutor for the continuing beginner group) holds a PhD in Classics, and has a special interest in the Homeric epics. She has been teaching in higher and continuing education for more than twenty-five years. She currently teaches at Newcastle University in the school of History, Classics and Archaeology.
Janet has extensive experience in teaching classical Greek language and literature, and is a keen advocate of the Reading Greek methodology, whereby students are introduced to grammar and syntax through carefully graded reading passages adapted from original sources, progressing to original texts. This approach enables students not only to learn the language, but also to acquire an understanding of the culture in which it flourished.

Course Tutors

Anthony Verity (tutor for the intermediate group) teaches and translates classical Greek, with a particular interest in Greek Literature, especially Homer and the tragedians. He studied classics and oriental languages at Cambridge and taught in leading independent schools before becoming headmaster of Leeds Grammar School and Master of Dulwich College. Anthony teaches in a collaborative style in seminar form.
Stephen Anderson (tutor for the advanced group) was educated at Trinity College, Dublin and St John’s College, Cambridge. From 1980 to 2015 he taught at Winchester College, where he was Head of Classics from 1984 to 2008 and subsequently Senior Tutor. In October 2015 he took up a new post as Lecturer in Classical Languages at New College, Oxford. He is co-author of a number of classical textbooks, including Writing Greek (2010), a manual of Greek prose composition, and A Little Greek Reader (2015), a collection of reading passages chosen to illustrate a variety of Greek constructions.

Dr Charles Weiss (guest lecturer) came from Atlanta, Georgia to study Classics at Columbia University (BA and MA) and Yale University (PhD), focusing on the languages and literatures of both Ancient Greek and Latin. He then came to Oxford to teach the subject for five years before becoming (in 2003) a Language Teaching Officer for the Faculty of Classics at Cambridge and Fellow and Director of Studies in Classics for Clare College, Cambridge. Dr Weiss specializes in language pedagogy in both languages and teaches Classical languages and literature for Clare College. He recently published a student’s introduction to Homer’s Odyssey for Cambridge University Press and has undertaken a new edition of Reading Greek for the Press.

Course syllabus

Aims:
Students should be able to extend their knowledge of basic patterns of Greek grammar and syntax. In addition, they should be able to develop their appreciation of literary style and increase their understanding of the historical and cultural context of the passages they are studying.

Content:

Continuing Beginners’ group: This weekend, we start at Section 3 of Reading Greek (there will be a revision session for Section 2). The required text is: JACT Reading Greek (2nd edition, CUP, 2007 - two volumes: Text and Vocabulary and Grammar and Exercises).

Presentation of the course:
Students work in small groups with their tutor. Absolute beginners are asked to familiarise themselves with the alphabet beforehand; for the other levels, students prepare the sections of the course book or the passages of Greek Literature to be read before they come. This gives plenty of opportunity for discussion and further exploration of the historical background or explanation of features of the language.

As a result of the course, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:
1. Recognise some new features of Greek language;
2. Recognise more vocabulary;
3. Have learned to recognise some new idiomatic uses;
4. Feel more confident about their ability to translate from Greek into English;
5. Feel that they are developing a sense of the style of different literary genres or authors;
6. Feel that they have learned something more about the background to the language and literature they are studying.
