Course syllabus

Aims:
The course will allow you to:
   1. Become familiar with those works of the period under discussion
   2. Recognise some of the characteristics associated with modern art of the period
   3. Discuss your responses to the works in an informal and supportive environment

Content:
The mid-19th century through to the 1930s witnessed huge social and political change in France. In response, at least in part to this, it was also a period of intense experimentation amongst avant-garde artists working in France. This course explores works produced by some of the key artists at the forefront of innovation, who changed the direction of Western European art.

The first four sessions of the course focus on Impressionism. We will discuss definitions of this term and its application. Different aspects of modern city life inspired Impressionist artists in diverse ways. How might Manet’s depictions of street life strike a different chord from those urban scenes created by Morisot and Renoir? And how do Degas’ images of dancers and bathers reimagine the representation of the human figure? When looking at Toulouse-Lautrec’s works, we will discuss the relationship between his paintings and posters and consider the impact of celebrity culture. And we will discuss how his work and that of Van Gogh’s extends beyond Impressionism.

We will also explore how experimental paintings were produced beyond the confines of Paris. How do Monet’s images of Giverny differ from his earlier, Impressionist depictions of the capital? We will also consider how the fishing town of Collioure in the South of France inspired Matisse and Derain in their development of Fauvism. The expressive use of bold colours seen in their work is also found in Picasso’s work. How might we discuss Picasso’s early work in relation to the recent past and how does his work make new ground?

There will be opportunities to look slowly at certain images in order to practise visual analysis and unpack potential meanings. Informal discussion and interaction will be welcomed.

Presentation of the course:
PowerPoint presentations will be used for each of the sessions.

As a result of the course, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:
   1. Recognise works discussed during the course
   2. Identify some of the characteristics associated with modern art of the period
   3. Give examples of modern artists we have discussed during the course
   4. Compare works at an introductory level
